

Sermon Tenth

A SERMON

Preach'd before the CONVOCAATION
OF THE
Bishops and Clergy

OF THE

Province of Canterbury at Westminster, Novemb. the 18th. 1689.

By WILLIAM BEVERIDGE, Archdeacon of Colchester.

Printed in Latin By the Bishops Command.

Made English by J. G. a Member of the Church of England.

Let ancient Customs still take place. Syn. Nic. Can. 6.

Licens'd and Entred.

London, Printed for N. R. and J. Bullord at the Old Black Bear in St. Pauls Church-Yard, 1689.

1493 . m . 40 .

✓cf

Wg B-2112
2/11WF

[2112 - 1/11/47]

F417

el

Dr. BEVERIDGE's
S E R M O N
Before the
CONVOCATION
ENGLISHED.

1912

NOT COVERED

1941-1942

2 MAG 1961

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be answered. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

1945-1946 1947-1948 1949-1950 1951-1952 1953-1954 1955-1956 1957-1958 1959-1960 1961-1962 1963-1964 1965-1966 1967-1968 1969-1970 1971-1972 1973-1974 1975-1976 1977-1978 1979-1980 1981-1982 1983-1984 1985-1986 1987-1988 1989-1990 1991-1992 1993-1994 1995-1996 1997-1998 1999-2000 2001-2002 2003-2004 2005-2006 2007-2008 2009-2010 2011-2012 2013-2014 2015-2016 2017-2018 2019-2020 2021-2022 2023-2024 2025-2026 2027-2028 2029-2030 2031-2032 2033-2034 2035-2036 2037-2038 2039-2040 2041-2042 2043-2044 2045-2046 2047-2048 2049-2050 2051-2052 2053-2054 2055-2056 2057-2058 2059-2060 2061-2062 2063-2064 2065-2066 2067-2068 2069-2070 2071-2072 2073-2074 2075-2076 2077-2078 2079-2080 2081-2082 2083-2084 2085-2086 2087-2088 2089-2090 2091-2092 2093-2094 2095-2096 2097-2098 2099-2100 2101-2102 2103-2104 2105-2106 2107-2108 2109-2110 2111-2112 2113-2114 2115-2116 2117-2118 2119-2120 2121-2122 2123-2124 2125-2126 2127-2128 2129-2130 2131-2132 2133-2134 2135-2136 2137-2138 2139-2140 2141-2142 2143-2144 2145-2146 2147-2148 2149-2150 2151-2152 2153-2154 2155-2156 2157-2158 2159-2160 2161-2162 2163-2164 2165-2166 2167-2168 2169-2170 2171-2172 2173-2174 2175-2176 2177-2178 2179-2180 2181-2182 2183-2184 2185-2186 2187-2188 2189-2190 2191-2192 2193-2194 2195-2196 2197-2198 2199-2200 2201-2202 2203-2204 2205-2206 2207-2208 2209-2210 2211-2212 2213-2214 2215-2216 2217-2218 2219-2220 2221-2222 2223-2224 2225-2226 2227-2228 2229-2230 2231-2232 2233-2234 2235-2236 2237-2238 2239-2240 2241-2242 2243-2244 2245-2246 2247-2248 2249-2250 2251-2252 2253-2254 2255-2256 2257-2258 2259-2260 2261-2262 2263-2264 2265-2266 2267-2268 2269-2270 2271-2272 2273-2274 2275-2276 2277-2278 2279-2280 2281-2282 2283-2284 2285-2286 2287-2288 2289-2290 2291-2292 2293-2294 2295-2296 2297-2298 2299-2300 2301-2302 2303-2304 2305-2306 2307-2308 2309-2310 2311-2312 2313-2314 2315-2316 2317-2318 2319-2320 2321-2322 2323-2324 2325-2326 2327-2328 2329-2330 2331-2332 2333-2334 2335-2336 2337-2338 2339-2340 2341-2342 2343-2344 2345-2346 2347-2348 2349-2350 2351-2352 2353-2354 2355-2356 2357-2358 2359-2360 2361-2362 2363-2364 2365-2366 2367-2368 2369-2370 2371-2372 2373-2374 2375-2376 2377-2378 2379-2380 2381-2382 2383-2384 2385-2386 2387-2388 2389-2390 2391-2392 2393-2394 2395-2396 2397-2398 2399-2400 2401-2402 2403-2404 2405-2406 2407-2408 2409-2410 2411-2412 2413-2414 2415-2416 2417-2418 2419-2420 2421-2422 2423-2424 2425-2426 2427-2428 2429-2430 2431-2432 2433-2434 2435-2436 2437-2438 2439-2440 2441-2442 2443-2444 2445-2446 2447-2448 2449-2450 2451-2452 2453-2454 2455-2456 2457-2458 2459-2460 2461-2462 2463-2464 2465-2466 2467-2468 2469-2470 2471-2472 2473-2474 2475-2476 2477-2478 2479-2480 2481-2482 2483-2484 2485-2486 2487-2488 2489-2490 2491-2492 2493-2494 2495-2496 2497-2498 2499-2500 2501-2502 2503-2504 2505-2506 2507-2508 2509-2510 2511-2512 2513-2514 2515-2516 2517-2518 2519-2520 2521-2522 2523-2524 2525-2526 2527-2528 2529-2530 2531-2532 2533-2534 2535-2536 2537-2538 2539-2540 2541-2542 2543-2544 2545-2546 2547-2548 2549-2550 2551-2552 2553-2554 2555-2556 2557-2558 2559-2560 2561-2562 2563-2564 2565-2566 2567-2568 2569-2570 2571-2572 2573-2574 2575-2576 2577-2578 2579-2580 2581-2582 2583-2584 2585-2586 2587-2588 2589-2590 2591-2592 2593-2594 2595-2596 2597-2598 2599-2600 2601-2602 2603-2604 2605-2606 2607-2608 2609-2610 2611-2612 2613-2614 2615-2616 2617-2618 2619-2620 2621-2622 2623-2624 2625-2626 2627-2628 2629-2630 2631-2632 2633-2634 2635-2636 2637-2638 2639-2640 2641-2642 2643-2644 2645-2646 2647-2648 2649-2650 2651-2652 2653-2654 2655-2656 2657-2658 2659-2660 2661-2662 2663-2664 2665-2666 2667-2668 2669-2670 2671-2672 2673-2674 2675-2676 2677-2678 2679-2680 2681-2682 2683-2684 2685-2686 2687-2688 2689-2690 2691-2692 2693-2694 2695-2696 2697-2698 2699-2700 2701-2702 2703-2704 2705-2706 2707-2708 2709-2710 2711-2712 2713-2714 2715-2716 2717-2718 2719-2720 2721-2722 2723-2724 2725-2726 2727-2728 2729-2730 2731-2732 2733-2734 2735-2736 2737-2738 2739-2740 2741-2742 2743-2744 2745-2746 2747-2748 2749-2750 2751-2752 2753-2754 2755-2756 2757-2758 2759-2760 2761-2762 2763

1907-1908 1909-1910

1. The first of these is the fact that the
the first of these is the fact that the

TO THE AUTHOR.

Reverend Sir,

PERUSING your Learned Discourse, lately Preached before the Sacred Synod, and finding in it such admirable Matter, so harmoniously banded, and so suitable to this present Age, wherein the best Church, and Religion in the World wou'd be in great danger of being Crucified, like their blessed Author, were they not maintain'd, and defended by such Props, as You, I thought 'twou'd A not not be amiss to render it into English for the benefit of those, who understand not the Latin Tongue, and being well assur'd, 'twou'd be very acceptable to the English Reader, as coming from You, whose known Candour, and Sweetness of temper (I doubt not) will pardon my presumption in this Attempt, which I fear, has not escaped the too common fate of all such sublime, and excellent Subjects, which is, to be foul'd, and sullied by ill Version. However such as it is, it's humbly presented by him, who is

S I R,

Your most devoted Servant,

A

J. G.

A

S E R M O N

Before the

CONVOCAATION, &c.

I Cor. XI. 16.

But if any Man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither the Churches of God.

WITH what, and how great Controversies the Church of England now a-days is exercised, and with how potent, and likewise malicious Enemies surrounded, we all indeed see and grievously resent; but no wonder, considering we are well assured, that this has been almost the constant, and perpetual fate of Christ's Church, wheresoever constituted. For if we peruse

A 2

all

all the Ecclesiastick Histories, derived down to us from the very times of the Apostles, we shall find no Age, wherein the Catholick Church has not been molested, either by Hereticks, or Schismaticks, or both together. That is to say, Tares are sown by the Enemy near the Wheat in the Lord's ground, and they'll grow together till the harvest. But truly such is the love of our God to his Ground, such the benevolence of the Almighty towards his Church, that he'll ne're permit the Wheat to be suffocated by the Tares, the Evangelical Doctrine by Heresy, and Discipline by Schism. And therefore we have no reason to fear our Church's sustaining so many Assaults of its Adversaries, seeing 'tis buoy'd up by an omnipotent God, as a pure, and sound Member of his Universal Church. But truly the purer, and sounder our Church is, and therefore more acceptable to God; the more, and fiercer Enemies it has among Men, who from one side to t'other set themselves wholly against it, and if they can't destroy, at least Endeavour to disturb it. For on the one hand Popish Priests, on the other Sectaries traduce, slander, and wound it in their words, and actions; they try all ways to obtrude their new Fangles and Ceremonies on us, and that so they may either utterly pull down, or corrupt our Church.

But we in the mean while relying on Divine assistance, fly to God alone, daily beseeching him in the name of his only begotten Son, that he wou'd vouchsafe to defend, and maintain a Church of his own.

own making. And he has been so propitious to our Prayers, contrary to our Deserts, in wonderfully delivering Us at least from one sort of our Adversaries, to wit, the Popish Recusants, and has given us reason to hope, that they'll ne're be capacitated again to molest our Church.

But even now one part remains, who tho' seemingly of the same Faith, and Doctrin, yet being seduced either by Ignorance, or Error, or peradventure some scruple of Conscience, alledge I know not what crimes against the Discipline, and Rites of our Church, and for that reason refuse Communion with us in God's Worship. And 'tis strange, how great mischiefs may arise from this apparently small beginning? For hence it is that Altars are erected against Altars; hence proceed Factious Tumults, and Mutual Hatreds among Brethren; hence 'tis that God's Worship is neglected, and the very Sacraments, one being thrust into corners, the other seldom celebrated; hence it is, I am amaz'd to speak, that impious words are rashly spoken against God, and against all Religion, as if it rather did afford matter for Discord, than Peace; hence lastly those popular calamities, which threaten both Church, and State, and thereupon perpetually disquiet both.

Now that some remedy at length may be opportunely apply'd even to these diseases, His most Serene Majesty has been pleased, doubtless by Divine inspiration, to assemble the Bishops, and whole Clergy of this Kingdom, that they may consult by what methods these pernicious differences may at last be so compos'd, our Church loosing nothing of its Purity, and Glory, nothing of its Authority, and Right, that they who dissent from us, may be reduced to our Holy Communion, or at least remain for ever destitute of all reasons, I don't say just, which they never had, but of all specious colours, which hitherto they have pretended for their Separation.

I confess, that this is a great, and very difficult undertaking, but as pious as necessary, and therefore worthy of the utmost endeavours of our Clergy. And how great soever the Labour and Work may seem, although not less than to strive against the Stream, yet we must not despair, if so that God be present, and influence our undertakings? And indeed we have so often experienced his singular Providence in defending our Church, that we have no reason to doubt, but that He will be present and propitious to our Importunities for it; whilst all things are directed according to His Divine Will reveal'd to us in Holy Writ: Which both we and our Dissenting Brethren hold to be the Supream Rule, whereby all Ecclesiastical Controversies are to be judg'd.

Now if we consult these Sacred Oracles, we shall find all things in them necessary for the obtaining Eternal Salvation. But not so many things touching the external Polity of the Church, much less particular Rites necessarily requisite for it: For truly God has left these to be us'd in every particular Church, according to those general Rules he has deliver'd deliver'd in the Holy Scriptures for that purpose: Such are, Let all things be done decently, and in order; Let all things be done for Edification: And others of the like nature, with which the usual Rites of our Church exactly agree. But what if a Contention shou'd arise between two Provincial Churches, or between divers Members of the same Province concerning any Ceremony, have we no Precept nor Example in the Holy Scriptures to stifle it? 'Tis true, we have an Example, which shou'd indeed have the force of a Precept, in as much as 'tis prescrib'd by the Holy Spirit of God; and upon this account committed to Sacred Writ, that it might be observ'd by all. But lest I shou'd seem to speak this for nothing, I think 'twill not be amiss to explain briefly that of the Apostle, which we just now cited; especially since nothing can be of greater use, and more necessary to be observ'd in all such Controversies as are to be decided by this Sacred Synod:

Therefore in the first place you are to take notice, That there were among the Disturbers of the Corinthian Church newly settled, those who held it decent for Men to be conversant in Publick Meetings, with their Heads cover'd, but Women uncover'd: Now the Apostle in this Chapter, from the First to the Sixteenth Verse, copiously reasons against this Custom, which some at that time began to introduce; and shews that the contrary ought to be observ'd every where. He argues first from Divine Testimony, not indeed directly, but by implication, for as much as it appears from the Word of God, that Man is the Image and Glory of God, and the Head of the Woman, but the Woman the Glory of the Man, made of Him and for Him. The Apostle largely handles this Argument to the Twelfth Verse, and then takes another from the Law of Nature, and the common Customs of Men. Judge in your selves says he, is it comely that a Woman pray unto God uncovered? Doth not even nature it self teach you? &c.

as

But in the last place, he produces his clearest Argument compris'd in these words, But if any Man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither the Churches of God.

Which is the same as if he had said, But if any Man is so contentious, as notwithstanding these Reasons, still to contend, that 'tis lawful for a Man even cover'd, but a Woman uncover'd, publickly to pray unto God; yet there's one Argument behind, by which both he and all Christians must of necessity confess themselves convicted, which is this, That we have no such custom, neither the Churches of God: Now amongst us and all other Churches, the quite contrary Custom hath obtain'd, whereby Men are taught to uncover, but Women to cover their Heads when they join in the Service of God.

I know that these words of the Apostle are interpreted a little otherwise by some: as if he affirm'd thus, (viz.) That neither they nor the Churches of God have such a Custom, to contend about about Matters of this nature. But besides that, admitting this Exposition, the Apostle wou'd contradict himself, because in this very place he sharply disputes with the Corinthians: Again, if we shou'd grant, that the Words may be thus expounded, it equally makes for our side; because 'tis evident, even from this very sense of the words, as well as the other, which is the true and genuine, and so conspicuous and manifest, that it requires no further explication, that the Apostle disputing concerning an Ecclesiastick Ceremony with the Corinthian Church, appeals to the Custom of the other Churches of God. Nevertheless, this one thing we may note, That these words, ἐδὲ αἱ ἐκκλησίαι τῷ θεῷ, are read in some Greek Manuscripts in the singular Number, ἐδὲ ἡ ἐκκλησία τῷ θεῷ, as the Syrian Interpreter has it: Which are also the words of the Vulgar Latin Version; and the same is to be seen in St. Cyprian, and other Latin Fathers. But the sense is all one. For αἱ ἐκκλησίαι, in the plural, tho indefinitely put, signify all the Churches of which the Universal consists. Therefore both ways, recourse is had here to the Universal Church, and the Argument is drawn from her Custom. For this reason St. Theodoret says of it, ἵνα μὴ ἐπὶ ὁ λόγος εἰσπράταται καὶ τὰς λίαν ἐκείνην. This Argument is sufficient to confute even the most contentious; For the Apostle shews, That not only he, but all the Churches of God think the same: So that he that acts contrary, opposes πρὸς τὴν Ἑκκλησίαν, the Universal Church, as Theophylact, and before him St. Chrysostom, comments upon the place.

These Words of the Apostle being thus concisely explain'd, fore-shew a plain and safe way to us, by which we may proceed in the determination of all such Cases. But if any Rite us'd by some Provincial Church, is controverted, we must make a diligent Enquiry into the Sentiments of all other Churches, and see whether the same has been approv'd by them. For the illustration whereof, we must observe, That in all Ages even from our Saviour's Passion, several Provincial Churches have been constituted in the greatest part of the World; which all together make that one Church, which we therefore commonly call Catholick or Universal. Which doubtless, must be computed from all the Churches, not only those that exist at one and the same point of time, but that ever had a being.

Moreover, all these in all Ages, and at all times, have agreed with the Church in necessary Articles of Faith. Now as to the Rites, they have been partly proper, and peculiar to particular Churches, partly common to all. Rites that are proper to one or two Churches, may be abrogated, or retain'd by the same, or admitted by others at pleasure. For they put on the nature of things things indifferent, and therefore are of no force, unless what they receiv'd from that Church by whose Authority they are establish'd. But Rites that have been always common to the Universal Church, that is, to all Churches throughout all Ages, or which is all one, to the greatest part of them, the very same ought still to be observ'd by every particular Church. For neither is it in the power of every particular Church, either to reject Rites when observ'd, or observe them when rejected by the Universal Church. If any of these shall do either of the two, 'tis Schismatical, disjoining it self from the Body of Christ, at least in that particular. But that every Church may be rightly constituted, so as to be made a sound Member of the Catholick, 'tis absolutely necessary for her to conform her self to that in all things, as long as it may be done, and religiously embrace her Discipline and Rites, as well as her Doctrine. Which, lest I may seem to speak without reason, I'll confirm with the following Arguments.

These very Words of my Text supply us with one. For certainly the Corinthian was a Provincial Church, into which some endeavour'd to bring new Rites. The Apostle being ascertain'd of this, disputes against it in this place; and proves that that Church cou'd. by no means admit of it. And his last and chief Argument he draws from the Custom tom of the Universal Church, as we observ'd before : Forasmuch as all other Churches should have no such, but a quite contrary Custom. But if any man, says he, seem to be contentious, we have no such custom; neither the Churches of God. From which words I thus argue :

What's contrary to the receiv'd Custom of all the Churches, ought not to be admitted by the Corinthian.

But this is contrary to the receiv'd Custom of all the Churches.

Ergo.

Now if the Church of Corinth, was not oblig'd to accommodate her self to, and observe the Rites of all the other Churches, this Argument of the Apostle would be of no weight. For by this supposition, that Church might have admitted that Rite, notwithstanding 'twas contrary to a Custom Universally receiv'd : And therefore the major proposition wou'd be false. But undoubtedly the Apostle argued rightly, being divinely inspired when he penn'd these Words : Which is a cogent reason, because he could not deceive by the Argument, nor be deceiv'd in the manner of arguing. And therefore a principal reason obliges every such Provincial Church, as the Corinthian was, diligently to observe the Rites of the Universal. For if any neglect the observance of them, he is by this infallible Argument, convinc'd of a grievous Error and Schism. Neither is it possible for him to defend himself by any Pretence :

tence: since God himself dictated this Argument to the Apostle, and from thence it necessarily follows, That 'tis the Will of God that every Provincial Church should conform to the Universal: And also that we always use this way of arguing which he has taught us, to determine all Controversies of the like nature.

Moreover, the same appears from the very nature and notion of a Church: For the Church generally so called, is a vast Society, or Congregation of Men professing the Christian Faith in all parts of the World: Whereof all Provincial Churches are so many Parts or Members. Now in all such Societies every Part ought to agree with its whole: And consequently the lesser with the greater.

Reason tells us this; The Law of nature commands it; and the Universal consent of Mankind judges it necessary. So that, if any thing enacted by the greater, obliges the remaining part, much more what is ordain'd by the greatest part of each Society; which it ought to observe if it wou'd continue a member, and enjoy the Priviledges of the same Society. Which rule, since it prevails in all manner of Societies, ought much more in the Church; which of all things should be the most Regular.

Accordingly Christ himself is the head of this Church, called Universal, who equally diffuses his Spirit Spirit thro' all its parts. The Apostle in the Epistle to the Ephesians, and elsewhere in many places explains this idea, or notion of the Church. Seeing therefore the Spirit of Christ himself is diffused thro' all the Members of this Body; and both guides, and governs them, whatsoever is performed by these Members let it be (as it ought) ascrib'd to his Holy Spirit. For altho' each Member is able perhaps to suffer some humane affliction, which yet all have done conjointly at all times, it cou'd scarcely proceed from any thing less than a common (if I may so say) Principle of all things, namely, the Spirit of God which generally actuates all things. And therefore it can't but be necessary to be still observ'd (as much as may be) by every Member.

The next Argument on this occasion is fetcht from the Apostolical Institution of all such Rites, which are observed by the Universal Church. For whatsoever the Apostles in the first institution of the Churches delivered for their observation, is undoubtedly necessary to their legitimate constitution. For otherwise they must have appointed something superfluous, which can't be alleg'd against the Apostles, considering that they have instituted nothing in the Church, but what was enjoyn'd them by Heaven.

Which since all Christians believe, they agree in nothing more, than that the Apostolical Institution of

of the Churches is a Rule, and Measure, according to which every present Church is to be model'd. So that no Constitution of any Church can be accounted Legitimate, unless it be consonant thereto. Now this being granted, it follows that no particular Church is lawfully constituted, unless it observes all the Rites of the Universal. For whatsoever she hath observed in all ages, must be of Apostolical Institution. For how is it possible for any one to imagine, that all the Churches dispersed over the face of the Earth shou'd every where use the same modes, unless they received them together with their Faith by Apostolick Tradition?

'Tis very clear, that the Apostles went about almost all Parts, and appointed Churches, where ever they came: 'Tis clear that they were conducted by the same Spirit: And lastly 'tis clear, that they endeavour'd Uniformity in all Churches. And therefore 'tis no wonder, if they have every where ordained the same Rites: 'Twou'd have rather been a wonder, if they had done otherwise. Now if such general Rites were not by Apostolick appointment, how cou'd they every where come into Churches so far distant from each others? Cou'd they from General Councils? For that indeed remains to be spoken to. For they must of necessity either be ordained by the Apostles, or by Oecumenical Councils, as Saint Augustin observes in his Epistle to Januarius, wherein he says, We preserve things not written, but delivered, delivered, which are indeed observ'd all the World over; whereby we may understand, that things recommended, and decreed either by the Apostles, or General Councils, (whose authority the Church venerates) are retain'd. Now we in this place speak only of such Rites, as were observ'd by the Universal Church before General Councils had their being, and which for this reason cou'd not be instituted by them. It remains therefore, that we attribute them only to Apostolical Institution, according to that common rule of the same Learned Father, who says, That the Universal Church holds not what's instituted by Councils, but always retain'd, which being deliver'd only by Apostolical Authority, is truly believed.

Therefore since 'tis necessary to legitimate the Constitution of every Church, that the Rites instituted by the Apostles be retain'd: And since all the Rites of the Universal are appointed by the Apostles themselves, none can doubt, but that the observing the same is necessarily requir'd to the Legal Constitution of every particular Church.

And this indeed is not my private Opinion, but is, and ever was the common Sentiment of all Christians, especially the Primitive. This appears from hence, that in times past, if any Controversy arose concerning any Ecclesiastical Rite, which some peculiar Church had receiv'd, 'twas always customary to enquire into the Practice of the Universal; and her constant usage touching that Rite, and afterwards to give in their Verdict.

Examples

Examples are very obvious, how ever I'll chuse one for the present. The Primitive Church, you all know, was long perplex'd with a grievous Contention concerning the time of the celebration of the Passover. For the Church of Asia contended with the Jews, that 'twas to be celebrated on the fourteenth day after the appearance of the Moon, let it fall on whatsoever Holy-day of the Week it would. Now all other Churches were wont to fast, and celebrate that Feast only on the day of our Lord's Resurrection. This controversy continued for many Years, till at length 'twas complain'd of in the general Council held at Nice. Where 'twas prov'd, that all other Churches, except that of Asia, us'd to celebrate that Feast on the Lord's day, and for that reason all the Fathers, that were present at that Synod, thought it fit, and reasonable, for the Asian Church to celebrate it on the same day: As the great Emperor, Constantine, expressly asserts in an Epistle to the Churches by whose command that Synod was summon'd. From whence it appears that the Nicene Fathers us'd the same arguments against the Asian Church, that the Apostle do's against the Corinthian, which he deduces from the Custom of all the other Churches. Also St. Cyprian has the same against Novatian, and St. Augustin against the Donatists: But Epiphanius brings it against all Hereticks, and likewise Schismaticks, condemning them all of Heresie, that either in Doctrine or Discipline Aposta-tize from the Universal Church. I might seem too prolix, and tedious, if I should but point out all the Councils, and Fathers, that have us'd this argument; and therefore our Proposition may well be inferr'd from them. For this Argument, which the Catholick Church has always us'd, takes for granted, that 'tis at least just, and rational, that all her rites shou'd be every where retain'd.

Upon which account we have more largely prosecuted this subject, because hereby we may the better, when occasion serves, repress all the adversaries of our Church; even the Romanists themselves, who assuming the Name of Catholicks, do insolently Glory in it. For the Romish Church whose Faith, and Customs all Papists are solemnly engag'd to maintain, hath invented so many new Tenets, and lately innovated so many superstitious Ceremonies, either rejected, or unknown to the Universal, and is at this day so imperious in her commands, that she only deserves the name of a most corrupted, much less Catholick Church. For she has nothing common with the Catholick, nothing with all other Churches, but rather all things Dissentaneous, and Repugnant, excepting, wherein she agrees with ours.

But omitting these things, as not pertinent to this place, let's rather advance those things which we have hitherto discours'd, that we may the

the better accomplish the Business in hand.

Now then 'tis apparent from what we have already premis'd, how expedient it is, that Ancient Rites and Manners observ'd hitherto by the Universal, that the same should also now be observ'd by every particular Church. Just so 'tis even in Bodies Politick. As for instance, in this very Kingdom there are divers Corporations, Burroughs, and other inferiour Fraternities, all which are empower'd to give Laws to themselves, and to their Members; Provided always, they neither do, nor enact any thing Contrary to the Statutes of this Realm, or (as we say) to the Common Law, or any ancient Custom, that has been introduc'd, and receiv'd in this Kingdom time out of mind, and so has obtain'd the force of a Law. Almost after the same manner 'tis with the Universal Church, which is the Kingdom of Christ. For this has it's Decrees written in the Word of God; and also has as it were a Common Law consisting of some certain Rites. Which tho' they be not expressly, and in just so many words, commanded in the said Decrees, yet are so adapted (if I may so say) to the general design and purport of them, and so useful for the Propagation, and Establishment of that Religion; which is instituted there, that they have been observ'd at all times, and every where throughout the whole Christian World, and for that reason are still to be observ'd by all Churches, that are desirous of holding;

a firm Union, and Communion with the Universal. For if any Church shall abolish any one of these Rites, or constitute any thing contrary to them, the same will thereby be depriv'd of that Custom, which all the other Churches of God enjoy. Which thing indeed the Apostle charges the Corinthians with as a fault. And deservedly too. Because it can't possibly be deem'd a lesser Crime to disannul the common Rites of the Universal Church, than to violate the Common Law of the Realm. That this is great, 'tis generally acknowledg'd, and some to their own Cost have found it so. But perhaps some will judge me guilty of a fault, in pleading hitherto for Rites, and not shewing what they are, or how to know them. But truly this don't belong to me, who have hitherto design'd nothing more, than to demonstrate, how just, and equitable it is, that (for instance) our, or any other Provincial Church, shou'd religiously observe all such Rites, which, 'tis certain, all other Churches have observ'd: Now what peculiar Rites ought to be rank'd here, and from whence that appears, I leave undecided to your Judgments. Perchance some of them will be debated here before you: For that reason I've forbore mentioning the least of them in this place, for fear I shou'd seem to anticipate your more discerning Judgments in these Affairs. But there are some general Institutions of the Universal Church, which (if I mistake not) are indisputable, and yet seem momentous to the determining such cases cases as will be laid open, in this Sacred Synod : Therefore I can't quite pass them by, lest I shou'd seem to fall short of performing the duty laid on me.

First, Therefore all the Churches of God have this Custom, and always had, that in whatsoever Province they are plac'd, the Bishops, and Pastors of that Province, as often as occasion requires, and opportunity permits may summon Synods or Conventions to deliberate, and consult about affairs relating to the Church in the same Province. Which Synods therefore are call'd Convocations, or Provincial Councils. This sufficiently appears from those huge and numerous volumes of Councils, in which you may see several such like Councils held in all Ages, and all Provinces over the whole Christian world. And far more, doubtless, are celebrated, that are neither extant there, nor in any other place at present. Which, I thought fit to note here, that any one may plainly see, that this our Synodical Convocation is no Innovation. Because nothing was ever more usual in all the Churches of God than the celebration of such Provincial Councils.

Add to this, that all Churches every where so Synodically congregated, were always us'd to create such Canons, or Ecclesiastick Laws, as they judg'd to be Expedient for the better administration of the the publick Worship of God, his Word and Sacraments, and the Discipline of the whole Church. This also abundantly appears from the said Acts of Councils: In which there are divers Canons set forth by every Provincial Church, as proper, and peculiar to itself. For tho' all the common Churches of God have scrupulously retain'd the rites of the Universal; yet they were always forc'd to add others to the Canons of the Church, that were adapted to the form and modes of that Kingdom or Province wherein each Church was situated: Otherwise it were almost impossible for any Provincial or National Church to subsist long in Peace. From hence also a common Custom has obtain'd in all the Churches of God, when all such Canons, and Laws are Constituted, to have regard not only to the well-being of any private member, but also to the Peace, and Tranquillity of the whole Church. And indeed many things are necessary to the procuring this that are not to our obtaining everlasting felicity. For which reason almost all the Canons, published hitherto by Provincial, or General Councils are instituted only for such things, that make for the external Discipline, and Peace of the Church. And hence 'tis also, that never any Church was extant, which did not register several things amongst their Laws, not against, but besides those things, which are contain'd in holy Writ. Which is so clear, and perspicuous, that I can't enough wonder, how any one can doubt of the truth thereof.

Besides

Besides 'tis customary in all the Churches of God to ratify such Canons, as they make, with Ecclesiastick Penances, to prevent impunity, when they are violated. This likewise appears from the Canons of all the Councils, upon which a man can scarce cast his eye, but presently at the first sight see Suspension, or Deposition, Anathema, or Excommunication against Lay-men, if they shall act otherwise. For neither has the Church ever esteem'd those worthy of the Sacred Ministry, nor these of her Communion, who refuse to obey Laws written as well for theirs, as its own advantage.

Further 'tis evident out of the aforesaid Collection of Councils, that all the Churches of God were wont so to frame, and temper these Laws, which they thought necessary for themselves, that they might be advantageous to, and edifying of the whole Community, and as much as possible, inoffensive. I said, as much as possible, by reason their ignorance is such, that they scarce are sensible of any thing: Such is the perverseness of others, that they wrest all to the worst sense. And truly 'tis hardly possible for any Civil Law, much less Ecclesiastical, to be so made, as to be approv'd by all. Therefore there's no reason, that the Church shou'd be solicitous for this sort of men, unless perhaps, that they may be better taught in discipline and manners by the force of the Laws. Again, others there are, who endeavour to serve God piously, and

and devoutly, and to direct their lives according to his Commands, and yet are of so weak, and Scrupulous a Conscience, that nothing almost can be done, that do's not prove offensive to them, and that too (as we should charitably believe) not from an obstinacy of will, or stiff inclination to any Faction; but from some pious, tho' groundless fear, lest it should be displeasing to God. And truly these men are to be taken into consideration before Laws are confirm'd, especially Ecclesiastick, lest, instead of eradicating old Scruples, we should implant new ones in their minds. And that also, whether they, who are thus troubl'd in conscience, wait on God's Altar together with the Church, or separately from it. For both are to be taken care of; these, that they may persevere in the Communion of our Church, the other, that they may be brought back to it. And certainly this is a work, and labour, deserving the cares and studies of us all. Which nevertheless is to be so enterpriz'd that nothing, for their sakes, may be omitted, that shall redound to the Interest of the Church, nor admitted, that shall prove detrimental to the same. For neither reason nor the perpetual Custom of the Church suffers a part to be preferable to the whole.

We may add further, That nothing has been more usual amongst the Churches of God, than to change Laws, that they've made, to abrogate ancient ancient ones, and to substitute others, perhaps quite different, in their room, when a necessitous time requires it. None conversant in Ecclesiastick Histories can be ignorant of this. For you can find no Church throughout the World, that has all the same Laws now, which it formerly had: Doubtless, all such Laws of Provincial Churches, whereof we now speak, are constituted pro hic & nunc, (if I may be allow'd to speak barbarously here) that is, with respect to time, and place: When these are chang'd, the Laws of Necessity must be chang'd for their accommodation to the present Customs of every Age and Place. But truly no Church ever did, or must do this without cogent Necessity. For every unnecessary alteration in Ecclesiastick Laws, stigmatizes the Church with inconstancy; and too much derogates from the Authority given it by our Blessed Saviour; it makes Prophanes call Religion into Question, whether or no it depends on the Will of Man? It sets several together by the ears; and keeps more still in a dubious expectation of some new attempt: It renders the minds of others doubtful, and uncertain what to do: It stirs up outrageous Tumults, often disturbing the Publick Peace. Neither also is any one so Skilful in the disposal, and provision of things, as to be able to foresee by any Art, what, and how great Miseries may be arising even from the

D

mutation

mutation of Laws incommodious. And therefore the changing of inveterate Laws for others, is at all times dangerous, unless such Necessity may compel, as is otherwise insuperable, and which is so manifest and apparent to the Eyes of all, that none may see a change, without seeing great Reason, and Necessity for it. Now if there be such a Necessity, all those Calamities will be averted, that generally attend an unnecessary change. Our Church will not lose a drachm of Honour or Esteem, that's due to her. For she, and her Authority will be the same. And all things will appear more peaceable, calm, fix'd, and quiet in her, than if they had kept their former State. All the Churches of God are taught this by Experience: And for this reason they never Scruple to abdicate Laws of their own Constitution, and to Confirm new ones, as often as they see occasion.

Now whether our Church be oblig'd by such a Necessity to alter any thing that's settled by her Laws, belongs to Wise Men, not me, to determine.

This only I'll presume to say, that, if it be necessary, to bring back wandering Sheep to Christ's Fold, if necessary, to remove Scruples from the Consciences of weak Brethren: If necessary to extinguish Hatred, mitigate Anger, and reconcile all Differences, as far as possible about Religion: If necessary to restore Ecclesiastick Discipline to its primitive fine vigour: If necessary to defend, and maintain the best Church on Earth against the Efforts of Men, and Devils: I say, If any one thinks these necessary, certainly he must likewise think it necessary to admit of such Alterations as in his Opinion are most conducive to this purpose: Whilst only those things are chang'd, which our Church has constituted by her Authority, not those, which the Universal Church has Establish'd by her Common Law. For all the Churches of God, and ours too, have always religiously forborn, (let the pretence be what it will) the least Alteration in these Laws. For to abolish, or reject what has been always, and every where observ'd, is not only to change an Ecclesiastick Rite, but also the Church it self, and render it different from all the Churches of God. Which yet never cou'd, nor, I hope, ever will be said of our Church,

For truly such was the care, and diligence of our Reformers, (whose happy memory we can never sufficiently extol, and reverence) such their Piety and Religion, such their divinely inspir'd Prudence, that, thinking it as necessary to keep firm Communion with the Catholick, as to recede from the Roman Church, renouncing all her Superstitious Innovations, they themselves religiously preserv'd whatever had been approv'd by all the Churches of God, and so ordain'd it in our Church, the most illustrious Image and Resemblance of the Catholick. And hence 'tis that our Church has always been the envy of the Roman; But so great an honour to all the Reform'd Churches, that I don't doubt, but that they wou'd imitate her pious Examples, were it in their power: So that we must not impute it to them, but to the necessities of time, and place, that they are not in all things agreeable to us.

Since therefore God has committed such a Church to our care; and since his Vicegerent here has now given us an opportunity to prosecute all things, that may tend to the peace, and advantage of his Church, let us employ all our powers and faculties for its accomplishment. Let us leave no means unattempted, to make all English-men to be of the Church of England. Let us endeavour all we can; to make her Faith, her Worship, and her Discipline, if possible, the wonder of the whole world, and she her self perpetual, by whose guidance we of this Kingdom may obtain everlasting Salvation thro' Christ, till his second coming. That all posterity may laud, and magnifie our God for moving so religious a Prince to assemble this Sacred Synod, and assigning such a preparation for it to the advantage of this our Church. If this Convocation shall be so pleas'd, to whose disposal all things are left. But whilst we are considering of these things, we call to mind the ancient Customs observ'd serv'd by all God's Churches, in the calm and sedate Celebration of their Synods : And let ours take example by that. Let us throw off all prejudiced Opinions, presumptuous Suspicions, and litigious Contentions, which only confound and disturb such Sacred Councils. But let all be done with that agreement, and consent, as becomes Christians, Clergy-men, and more especially all us of the Church of England, when we consult about the Establishment of her Peace. Whatsoever we do, let it be done by universal Approbation, That in this we may truly say with the Apostle, If any man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither the Churches of God.

But whatsoever pains we take for the good of our Church they'll avail not, unless adorn'd with good works : Wherefore most Reverend Fathers in Christ, and dearly beloved Brethren give me leave to beseech you in the name of Christ, so to comport yourselves, as Becomes Fathers, and Sons of to holy a Church : Let your light so shine before men, that they seeing your good works, may glorify your Father in Heaven ? Let all see and admire the eminent Sanctity of the Church of England in producing men most holy. By this means we shall engage not only men, but God to be of our side. Who alone is able to defend; and for ever preserve a Church first of his own building, and then restoration, from all the Machinations of its enemies.

Let

Let God therefore arise, and his enemies be scatter'd. God grant that our Church may flourish and increase daily more and more. God grant that the Gates of Hell may ne're prevail against it. Lastly God grant, that his most holy Spirit may guide this Sacred Synod assembled in his name, and lead them into all truth, that whatsoever they do, may end in the glory of God, the good and settlement of the Universal Church, and more especially, this of England, through our Lord Jesus Christ, to whom with the Father, and holy Spirit be ascrib'd all glory, and honour now and evermore, Amen.

FINIS.

